Kidd added that personal contacts would be made with sportswriters on each of the New Orleans newspapers and radio and television stations in giving fullest publicity to the event.

"We feel that in doing this," Kidd said, "we may be able to attract many out-of-town visitors to compete in the event in Bay St. Louis."

When he hit the center of the conflagration, he fell from his bicycle and received burns on the face and leg.

James Roos, N. O. Officer, and Clerk of Harbor District, was honored last Thursday night in New Orleans when he was presented a ceremonial life membership by the Crescent City Lodge No. 2 of the Fraternal Order of Police.

Mrs. James A. Evans Is Named Winner Of Eagle's "Favorite Hobby" Contest

Mrs. Valda B. Evans has been named winner of the Eagles Hobby Column Contest.

Mrs. Evans' prize winning hobby is making scrap books for children. It is a simple hobby that can be done easily and inexpensively by anyone, but it is a hobby that brings a great deal of pleasure not only to the hobbyist but to the many children who are recipients of her scrap books.

Picking a winner in the contest was no easy matter for the judges. It is a simple hobby that can be done easily and inexpensively by anyone, but it is a hobby that brings a great deal of pleasure not only to the hobbyist but to the many children who are recipients of her scrap books.

The Eagle sincerely thanks the many readers who submitted their hobby to the hobby column and made the contest possible.

Mrs. Evans will receive a check for $10.00 for the story of her hobby, which is reprinted here in part for the benefit of anyone who might have missed it when it originally was published.

Many are a hobby that people of many ages can enjoy, and costs so little. It consists of making scrap books for children.

Every magazine we pick up today is full of colored advertisements, and most of them have children in them. Many are of animals. You will be surprised to find how many pictures in every magazine would be of interest to small children.

The pictures you use in your scrap book depend on the age of the child you expect to give it to. Also, the size of scrap book you use depends on the age of the child.

For small children, I use mostly animal pictures and pictures of different types of cars.

I also use for small children pictures of children eating different kinds of food. This is an easy way to teach children good food habits.

If I am going to give the book for a Christmas present, I always start my book with pictures of Christ, the manger scene, etc. Old Christmas cards are good to use for this. Then I follow with Santa Claus and Christmas pictures.

For small children I use the small scrap books that you can buy at all ten cent stores, as small children cannot handle a large book. For older children I use the larger scrap books.

For girls I use pictures in which little girls predominate, and for boys I use pictures with boys and men. Lots of cars, trucks, trains, boats, etc.

For very small children I sometimes buy pieces of bright colored cambric in different colors, cut them the size of a book, and stitch all the colors together down the center just like a book is stitched. Then paste pictures on both sides of the book. They can handle a book of this kind and not tear it.

One will be amazed at how much pleasure children get out of a scrap book of this kind. They enjoy them more than any book you can buy at the store, if you select your pictures carefully.

If the scrap book is for your own child, you can always weave a story around the pictures, such as naming the objects in the picture for people, or things that are familiar to the child.

Railroad Offers Compromise On Train Service

Mayor Scafile Rejects L. & N. Proposal As Unsatisfactory

The Public Relations Officer of the American Legion here was informed last a compromise had been offered by the L. & N. RR in its controversy with local citizens on the question of improved passenger train service here.

The compromise was offered by RR representatives at a hearing in Jackson April 6. The offer was declined by Mayor Scafile, who felt that the offer was not a compromise, but a concession.

It was stated that a further offer was then made by the L. & N. representative, but such offer, not being in writing, was not acceptable.

The RR representative then requested a delay in the hearing to allow the RR time to make the same proposal to local citizens. The request was granted and the hearing at Jackson was recessed until May 4.

"The American Legion here was the first organization to protest the lack of adequate rail passenger service for our people," according to the Legion officer. "Our Legionnaires have followed this action and have been active in this movement to advance Bay St. Louis and Hancock County," he said.

"We feel that our 300 members, to the man, will back the City Council in this effort to help develop our community," he concluded.

Regarding Rabies

BY DR. C. M. SHIPP
County Health Officer

Rabies is not a new disease. It is as old as life itself. This is a disease that is shared by man and many blooded animals. Rabies is never transmitted from man to man. It is always transmitted from the bite of the lower animal. What would you do if you or one of your children were bitten by a rabid animal? There are many things that you can do but you should be careful not to do the wrong thing. These are the things you should do: You should not lose your temper and destroy the animal. If the animal has rabies it will certainly die in ten days. Usually they die in five. Animals that scratch you will not transmit rabies through their claws although they are likely to infect you with lock-jaw germs. Therefore the patient should get a shot of tetanus antitoxin by his family physician. The arrangement of the rabid animal's teeth will determine whether you are likely infected or not. Blunt teeth are less dangerous than sharp pointed teeth. Puncture wounds are the worst. Bites through the clothing are less dangerous than on the bare skin because the fabric acts as a shield, removing the germs from the teeth. The person gets into a bad fix from punctures of animals like cats, dogs and snakes with sharp pointed teeth.

The poison does not get into your blood stream, but it travels to the brain through the nervous system by passing between the nerve and its sheath which covers the nerve trunk like a sleeve.

Bites around the hands and feet and legs give plenty of time to use a vaccine, for the journey to the brain is a slow process. It takes from 10 to 20 days for the poison to reach the brain. However, bites on the face, neck, arms and legs are dangerous because of the proximity to the brain. This is the reason why preventive treatment is started as soon as possible. Rabies germs situated on the skin are not dangerous because the skin is a good protective coat. Rabies germs on the skin can be killed by the use of a strong antiseptic. Rabies germs on the skin can be killed by the use of a strong antiseptic.

If you are bitten by a rabid animal, the injured part should be washed with soap and water and the injury covered by your family physician. A dog or cat should not be killed, but kept under observation for a period of 10 days. If living after that time you do not need to take the shots.

If the animal begins to show symptoms of rabies, it should be locked up for securely chained. The early symptoms are nervous manifestations, staggering on account of paralysis and saliva dripping from its mouth. This is caused by the paralysis of the throat muscles. The animal can neither spit nor swallow. Therefore the saliva has to run out of its mouth. If it attempts to drink water frequently it will have fits or convulsions on account of this throat paralysis.

If the animal bites you and runs away, the doctor has no chance to determine whether or not the animal has rabies. And if you thought the animal had rabies, it would be necessary for you to take 14 shots, one every day.

There are three ways in which we determine whether or not an animal has rabies. First the clinical symptoms observed by a man who is familiar with the disease. Second, keep the animal under observation for 10 days, for if it had rabies it will surely die. Third, ship the head to the laboratory for brain examination.

The reason for this article is that many, many people, exposed to rabies, do not know the right thing to do. Advise the patient to take rabies treatment. The only treatment he has at his disposal is preventive. For he sure cannot cure a case after the symptoms once appear.

BHS Senior Play Is Hailed As Smash Hit

A full house thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the presentation "Apple Blossom Time" given by a cast of seniors for their class play Friday night at Bay High School. The setting for the play had quite a professional look, and no detail had been spared in stage arrangement.

The play boasted no minor roles, and each character was performed with definite skill. No prompting was necessary as the young actors were line perfect. They gave veteran skill not often seen in high school productions. Keith Tunkel and Sue Smith, playing the lead roles, had complete stage presence at all times. Timing of the play was particularly good. The pace of the play was rapid without rushing throughout the entire three acts.

Billy Burrows brought roars of laughter with each line and his closing line of the show was one of the best. The curtain descended on a definite triumph.

Gayle Courtege and Malcolm Morgan were an excellent team. Clare Cost, as a pretty neighbor, was definitely just that, graceful and poised in her stage movements.

William Reese, playing an extroverted young man full of his own ego, did as well as a performer as any seen in Bay St. Louis. Larry Smith, teamed with young Burrows as a comedian, was a perfect straight for Billy's antics.

Ann Jenkins, who played the pretty, unsympathetic boy snatcher, of the show, was restrained and finished in her interpretation of the role, giving an impression of extensive training. May Palmer, sought by two boys, was refreshing and wholesome as the girl given attention for the first time, who finds herself the idol of a pair of swains.

Lois Stoufflet played the money mad older woman quite well, and brought several good laughs with her funny entrances and exits.

Joyce Pernicelli wound up the cast as "the girl who'll take any boy just any, to have a man of her own." Not subtle in her methods, she chased her man all over the stage with a vengeance and brought many laughs in her desire to hold on to an illusive male.

The play was directed by Miss Catherine Cryer, a member of the Bay High faculty, whose talents for direction should be given consideration by the local Little Theatre Group. The timing and direction give evidence of someone very familiar with amateur theatricals.
